Secretary of State Ed Balls and Prime Minister Gordon Brown paid a surprise visit to City Academy in Homerton this month

It's not every day you become one of the first ever students in a brand new school. It's even more unusual to meet the Prime Minister at the same time. But that's what happened at City Academy when pupils welcomed Gordon Brown as he made an unexpected visit to the Homerton school with Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families, Ed Balls, this month. As part of his visit. the PM announced changes to the criteria needed for private sponsors of academies with a focus on demonstrating leadership skills.

now go the extra mile to help make Hackney cleaner and greener following a massive expansion of recycling to include Tetra Paks and nearly all plastic materials.

In response to public demand, the Council has further improved its borough-wide recycling service to deal with empty milk and fruit juice Tetra Pak cartons, as well as margarine and ice cream tubs, plastic bags and yoghurt pots.

From October, householders, whether they live in street properties or estates, will be able to recycle all these items.

This will also save money because the cost of processing landfill waste is more expensive than recycling. The expansion of this service, can be achieved without costing Council Tax payers a penny more, as all extra funds will be met by Hackney's existing recycling budget.

Every street level property in the borough has a weekly Green Box (dry recyclables) and Blue Bin (food waste) collection. Over 16,000 street level properties also have a Brown Bin service (garden waste). And all estates and highrise properties in Hackney have a nearby recycling bank.

Ćllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Residents told us they wanted to be able to recycle more of their plastics, and now's their chance.

"Hackney is already recycling a fair amount of its rubbish. But there's still a lot of waste heading for black bins, which could be recycled. Recycling not only saves rubbish from rotting in landfill, but it's also a cheaper and more efficient way of dealing with waste, so residents who recycle are also helping the Council run the borough more efficiently."

Hackney was one of the first councils to introduce compulsory recycling for street level properties and to sign-up to the 10:10 commitment to reduce CO2 emissions. Currently, almost a quarter of Hackney's waste is being recycled.

Message from the Mayor

Greener, cleaner & cheaper

WHEN I ask residents about how we can continue to improve the services run by the Council, an issue that comes up regularly is how we can widen the range of materials that can be recycled, specifically increasing the range of plastics, including Tetra Pak cartons.

It was important for us not to introduce this until there was more British-based recycling companies that had sufficient capacity to process plastic, otherwise too much of it had to go abroad. But now that problem has been solved, and we are able to significantly increase the Council's recycling service for everyone in the borough whether you live in a high-rise block or a street property.

As well as helping the environment, increasing the amount of waste we recycle also helps us run the Council more cost-effectively. Although recycling still costs the Council money, it is now cheaper to recycle waste than to put it into landfill sites.

Throwing out rubbish is going to get more and more expensive over the next few years. Hackney is the only council in the country to have frozen its Council Tax for four years running, without any cuts to services and whilst continuing to invest in services most important to residents, such as keeping the borough clean and providing more things for young people to do.

Significantly increasing the amount of waste we recycle will help us keep Council Tax low, and continue investing in services. If you throw your recyclables into the rubbish bin, you will be literally wasting your money.

Look out for issue 218 of Hackney Today for more details as to how these changes will affect you.

DURING the Olympic and Paralympic Games in 2012 the eyes of the world will be on Hackney.

Construction of the new International Broadcast Centre and Main Press Centre in Hackney Wick (pictured above) is well under way. At its peak the centre will house 20,000 journalists and broadcasters from around the world – reporting to an international audience of four billion people.

This building will provide around 900,000 square feet of flexible business space following the Games, and the Council has already started negotiations with potential occupiers to ensure that thousands of high-quality jobs are created. This is part of the sustainable legacy the Council is determined to secure for Hackney residents from the Olympics.

City Academy Principal, Mark Emmerson, said: "We are delighted to welcome the Secretary of State to see our wonderful new building and to meet staff and students as we start our Academy. This is an exciting time for us and the hard work starts now."

He added that there was a collected sharp intake of breath among the pupils when the famous guest arrived for morning assembly.

The borough's newest school opened on 3
September with 220 of its first Year Seven students.

The Academy, which specialises in business, has been sponsored by the City of London Corporation and accountancy firm KPMG and was developed in partnership with The Learning Trust.

The school joins three other academies in the borough: Mossbourne, in Hackney; Dalston's Petchey; and Bridge in Haggerston.

Benefits fraudster jailed

A BENEFITS cheat has been jailed after pleading guilty to a £2,500 fraud.

Gary McIntyre, 32, of Upper Clapton, failed to inform the Council and the Department for Work and Pensions that he was paid for work between September 2007 and January 2008 while still on benefits. Consequentially, he was overpaid in housing benefit by £1,305, Council Tax benefit by £264 and Job Seekers Allowance by £1,006.

McIntyre was sentenced at Thames Magistrates Court on 2 September to two months imprisonment.

Cllr Samantha Lloyd, Cabinet Member for Finance, said: "The Council will not tolerate benefits cheats, and will not hesitate to pursue them through the courts."

Dennis has photographed many of the world's most famous musicians in a long and successful career. He first made his name charting the career of reggae legend Bob Marley.

THE latest recruits to an Olympic work experience scheme will be volunteering at the London 2012 headquarters. The 20 Trailblazers – including 58-year-old Hackney resident Sarah Mooniamah – will work one day a week in Canary Wharf through the London 2012 Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) pre-Games volunteer programme.

More than 40 people have now been through the Trailblazer programme, contributing 4,041 man hours since January. Sarah said: "The schemes have given me an opportunity to organise groups to visit the Olympic Park and train to be a tour quide. The sky is the limit as far as I am concerned." Sarah came to Trailblazers through the Personal Best programme, partly funded by the Council, which offers opportunities to residents who are not in work or education. RESIDENTS have until 18 October to vote for the landmark they would like to appear on an celebratory Olympic badge. Locations in the running are the Hackney Empire, E8; Sutton House, E9; St Augustine's Tower, E8; and Hackney Marshes, E9. The collectable 'London Landmark' pins will be part of a set of 33 - one from each London borough - due to go on sale next year. The vote is being run in partnership with London Councils and supported by the 33 local authorities that compiled the shortlist. The results of the vote will be announced at the end of October, as part of the celebrations for 1,000 days to go until the start of the 2012 Games. To vote, visit: www.london2012.com/landmark

Building bridges

CONSTRUCTION work is under way on a bridge that will link Hackney Marshes to the 2012 Olympic Park. From 5 October, the Olympic Delivery Agency (ODA) will start to move soil onto East Marsh to build a ramp so the bridge can be used by cyclists, buggies and wheelchair users. The work will affect three football pitches, which will be moved to the current rugby pitches site. The ODA will fund two replacement rugby pitches on the main Marshes. The whole area is receiving a multi-million pound investment package as a result of the 2012 Games, which will improve facilities.

Back to life

LANDLORDS, developers and residents are being urged to highlight empty buildings in Hackney so the Council can bring vacant homes back into use. The call is part of a drive to increase the number of decent homes in the borough. In 2008, empty properties were turned into Unused properties can invite dumped rubbish, or cause damp to neighbouring buildings through leaking roofs or gutters, and the Council can take enforcement action against landlords who consistently refuse to remedy this. Landlords wanting to return empty homes to use can apply for grant funding while owners, developers, estate agents and residents can also find out available options. Nasty neighbours locked out

A NUISANCE household has been shut down thanks to new powers to tackle anti-social behaviour.

For the first time, the Council has been able to grant police a Premises Closure Order, ending persistent anti-social behaviour, blighting the lives of residents at Lucan House on Colville Estate, N1. The order was granted at Thames Magistrate's court on 4 September. Under the order, anyone trying to get into the property will be committing a criminal offence. Newlon Housing Association has also begun legal proceedings to repossess the property.

In a witness statement, one resident said: "The actions of the perpetrator and their associates have been completely unacceptable and caused my family considerable loss of sleep and stress."

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "This is a real win for us and for residents of Lucan House. No resident should have to live in fear because a few people are bent on creating an intolerable nuisance."

Boxing clever

By Karyn Michael

SPEAKER of Hackney, Cllr Muttalip Unluer, stepped into the ring with former European Super Middleweight Champion James Cooke MBE to mark the opening of refurbished facilities.

James has been involved with the Pedro Youth Club on the Clapton Park Estate for years, after setting up an amateur boxing club there to offer more activities for local young people and help nurture prospective sporting talent.

He proudly unveiled a newly refurbished room at the club, which is fully equipped with a boxing ring and training equipment, and was completed with the help of local businesses and patrons of the club.

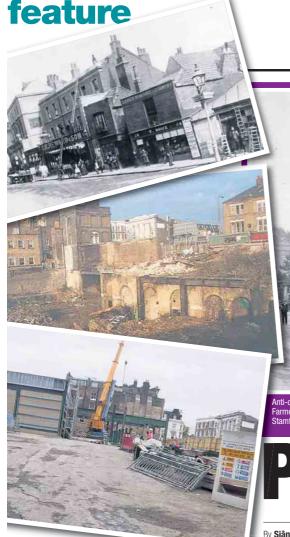

The facility was officially launched by the Earl of Ulster on 5 September, attended by scores of former boxers and featuring a performance by a pipe band, an auction of sporting memorabilia and an exhibition boxing match.

Cllr Unluer said:
"Congratulations to everyone involved with getting the Pedro Amateur

Boxing Club off the ground. It is an excellent addition to the Pedro Youth Club, providing access to local young people for an activity that can provide discipline as well as a great way of keeping fit."

The Pedro Club's other facilities include a dance studio, and recording studio. It is located at 175 Rushmore Road, Lower Clapton.

Personal pasts

By Siân Mogridge, Archivist

ackney is changing.
Whether it's the 2012
Olympic Park or the redevelopment in Dalston, everywhere you look something new seems to be happening.

But the borough is used to changing and evolving. In the 19th century when London was expanding at a rapid pace, Hackney was catapulted from a collection of small villages into part of a massive conurbation.

You can get an idea of those changes from population figures and maps, but for a close view you need to turn to local people. John Robert Daniel-Tyssen, steward of the Manor of Hackney from 1829 to 1852, collected lots of manuscripts and books about Hackney's past. His collection formed the basis for the borough's present archive and local studies library. He is also thought to have commissioned local artists to make a record of buildings and scenes that he knew were shortly to disappear.

There is a long tradition in Hackney of people observing and recording their area. Alfred Braddock, an amateur photographer, took pictures of the area in the late 19th century. He ran a local stationer's shop where he also sold his prints.

The most notable 'observer' was Florence Bagust. In the 1870s, when she was a young child, her family moved to Clapton. As far as we know she lived there for the rest of her life and collected as much information about Clapton as she could, to fill nine volumes. They are more like scrap books than anything else, with a wealth of photos, watercolours, postcards, newspaper

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

Sweeter than San Francisco

HAT would bring Hackney's very own Willy Wonka to the borough?

"People kind of look at me in a strange way when I tell them that we moved here from San Francisco. But there are surprisingly a lot of similarities between the two places.

"There's a kind of renegade, creative energy, it's artistic, and there's a lot of diversity, and different cultures, there's an edginess to it, it's comfortable and it's progressive.'

So explains US-born chocolatier Anthony Ferguson, who has been living in Stoke Newington with his English wife Susan, and their baby son Nikolas Bahari, since last December.

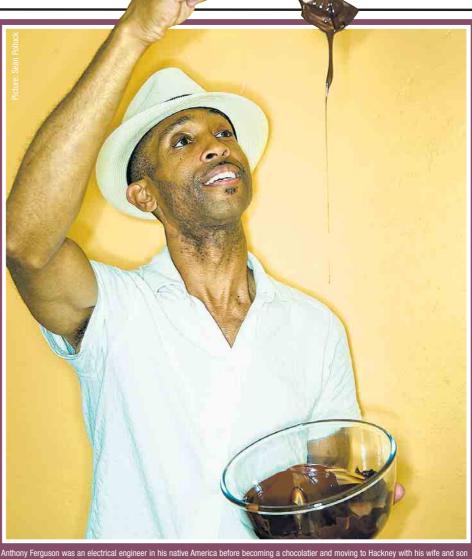

The family decided to move to England because it was becoming increasingly difficult to make a living in the US. Anthony had been running his own chocolatemaking business since 2003, but after Nikolas was born in 2008, it wasn't making enough money to support the whole family and Susan was struggling to find a job in the charity

Susan now works for Cancer Research UK, and Anthony divides his time between caring for Nikolas and creating chocolates in their kitchen. But he wasn't always a chocolatier.

Born in Flint, Michigan, in 1965, he studied electrical engineering and worked for big companies including General Electric and General Motors and then for a large computer manufacturer in California's Silicon Valley for nearly 10 years before being made redundant in 2001. He rented an apartment in Barcelona for a month while he 'decided what to do with the rest of (his) life' and thought he would import fine European chocolate into America.

But once he was back home, he changed his mind. He said: "I wanted to do something that was unique and personal and that's hard to do when you are selling someone else's products.'

So he took a two-week intensive chocolate-making course at the University of California - learning the science behind the sweets and set up his own company in September 2003. Business grew steadily - mainly by word of mouth after people had seen his handmade chocolates - which use exotic flavours and spices such as cumin, raspberry and mint - at fairs and

By the time he left the US he was supplying five-star hotels, had made chocolates for the Golden State Warriors basketball team, and supplied 4,000 boxes of chocolates for a vineyard to send to its wine club members. Although it was hard starting from scratch again, he says there have been some benefits including it being cheaper here because he can work from home.

whereas US laws meant he had to hire industrial kitchens

Also he has moved to using organic ingredients.

"In San Francisco my products were designed to have a long shelf-life. But since coming here I've gone organic - because of Nikolas, I want to have a positive effect on the world in which we live. Now I use fresh herbs from our garden and buy organic ingredients from local shops, so I feel I'm able to do that here in Hackney.

Anthony is the latest of five local companies to be supported by Growing Communities, which runs Stoke Newington Farmers' Market. The not-for-profit organisation helps them set up and develop their businesses, sell their goods at the market, and promote sustainable food production.

All your recycling questions answered

Q: My neighbour has a net that covers her Green Box to stop her recycling blowing away. Where can I get one of these?

A: The net you have seen is provided by the Council. The elasticated cover helps to keep waste in your Green Box, which, as you mentioned, prevents lighter items from being blown away. Nets also stop animals from removing items and deter passers-by from putting unwanted litter in the boxes

This helps to make the collection crews' and street cleaners' jobs easier too.

The nets are very popular with residents. They are provided free of charge, on request, and delivered direct to your property. The nets are also delivered with every new Green Box ordered.

The Council urges residents not already using a Green Box or a net to order one by calling the recycling hotline on: 020 8356 6688.

Waste-saving breakfast tips

By Gracia Douglas

RESIDENTS are being urged to cut down on waste and enjoy a healthy breakfast, as part of the national Love Food Hate Waste campaign.

A recent survey suggests one-in-eight people don't eat breakfast, and say lack of time is the main reason. But including breakfast on a school day needn't be stressful.

Every day in the UK people end up throwing out nutritious food, including 1.6 million bananas; 1.3 million unopened yoghurts; 600,000 uncooked eggs; 1.2 million sausages and 20 million slices of bread.

Top tips include freezing sliced bread and bagels ready for toasting; using up leftover cheese and ham in an omelette; and making sure milk doesn't get left out overnight.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "The new school term can be a costly and busy time of year for many families.

"But following a few quick and easy breakfast tips from Hackney's Love Food Hate Waste campaign can help save time and money while supporting our efforts to reduce waste in the borough. A good breakfast is the ideal way to kick-start the day for children and grown-ups."

Taking a walk on the wild side

By Marcel Reinard

A WILDLIFE initiative at East Reservoir aims to divert young people at risk of falling into crime by teaching them outdoor survival skills.

London Wildlife Trust, which manages the N4 reservoir, has won £28,000 in funding to set up a project to teach 11 to 18-year-olds bushcraft skills, as well as tips on how to reconnect with nature and green spaces in order to help counteract gang culture.

The scheme, Wild about Bushcraft, was created as a response to fears about gun and knife crime and aims to positively engage young people, said Leah McNally, from London Wildlife Trust. "Using our unique bushcraft activities in the inner city, we are well placed to reduce crime and fear of crime in London," she added. Using our unique bushcraft activities, we are well placed to reduce crime and fear of crime Activities on the agenda include shelter building, traditional fire lighting methods, foraging for wild food, water purification, cooking on camp fires, positive knife use for wood carving, tree planting, coppicing, reed pulling and wetland management. The project will provide 556 local young people with hands-on environmental experiences in an urban wilderness.

Through co-ordinated sessions, the Trust also hopes they will gain the confidence and knowledge to help improve East Reservoir Community Garden.

The scheme, which won funding from the Community Fund and the Youth Sector Development Fund, is due to be up and running later this autumn.

education

Food for thought

CELEBRITY chef and Olympic medalist gave students some food for thought about career and training opportunities in catering during the run up to London 2012.

Guest speakers Tasha Danvers, Beijing Olympic bronze medallist, and GO chef of the year, Mark Hix discussed the importance of the sector to the Games and national economy at the Hospitality Future Skills 2009 event, hosted by Hackney Community College (HCC). Visitors were also privy to insights from hospitality employers such as Sodexo and The Savoy Hotel. Other highlights of the 3

September event included a panel discussion, cookery demonstration from Mark, and group master classes by chef lecturers from HCC's London City Hospitality Centre. HCC principal Ian Ashman said: "We were delighted to host this event. As a College, we're dedicated to helping Londoners make the most of the opportunities the Games will bring."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Fad fashion

FOUR Hackney students are set to see their creations hit a London Fashion Week runway after reaching the final of a tough design competition. Clapton Girls' Technology College's Simone Hines, 17, Sumayya Julium, 18, from Skinners' Company for Girls, and Aminata Kulufua, 19, and Kesoon Chance, 17 hoth from RSix College, will represent Hackney in the last stage of the FAD Junior Awards 2009. In July, the quartet, along with 19 other participants, spent a week at top fashion school Central St Martins and had just five days to complete a catwalk project. They are now due to go head to head on 22 September with the other young hopefuls at Vauxhall Fashion Scout for the industry placement prize.

Simone said: "This project has had a major effect on me. It's reinforced the fact that I want my career to be in this industry. There are no ifs, buts or maybes about it. Doing this now, I realise I can get somewhere - it's in my hands, I can touch it." For more info, visit: www.fad.org.uk

Who's top of the class?

Following Hackney's best-ever GCSE results, the Teaching Awards are looking for Hackney's top teachers for 2010. The awards were set up to reward the achievements of educators and celebrate those dedicated to teaching. Parents, pupils, young people and peers can nominate the teachers and schools they feel have made a difference to their area. Earlier this year Kevin McDonnell (below) from Stormont House School received a distinction award in the secondary head teacher of the year category. At the time he called it 'a gold medal for all the hard work carried out by the school and governors'.

Next year's awards will introduce three new categories:

New horizons

A PHYSICAL education initiative is aiming to cut the chances of obesity and social exclusion in young disabled students.

As part of the Hackney Schools Inclusive Sports Coaching Scheme, disabled young people will get the chance to try three new sports during lessons.

The new scheme has been developed following last year's Hackney Schools Sports Championships - a Beijing-London Olympic and Paralympic handover event - which left disabled students and PE co-ordinators eager for more coaching and activities

Over the next three years, schools will receive six weeks of training from expert instructors in archery; goalball, the blindfolded Paralympic game originally devised to help the rehabilitation of blind WWII veterans; and wheelchair basketball.

Aneurin Wood, disability inclusion officer for The Learning Trust, which is leading the scheme, said: "The aim of the coaching is not only to give students the opportunity to take part in inclusive sports, but also to provide schools with the tools to develop a truly inclusive sports programme. The reality is that sports like wheelchair basketball are fun for all and are the perfect tools to integrate, educate and motivate both disabled and non-disabled young people alike.'

NS Harsha: Nations & Chen Chieh-jen: Factory

TWO striking pieces of work are on display at Rivington Place, making full use of an excellent space. NS Harsha's Nations is a vibrant, colourful installation of 192 sewing machines, each with the flag of a United Nations country.

REVIEW A still from Chen Chieh-jen's Factory

A mass of coloured thread bind the machines together, hinting at the complexity and strengths of international relations. With a clear view through a glass wall, the striking project draws second glances from passers by. It will be lit at night for part of the exhibition. Upstairs, artist Shiraz Bayjoo is running a temporary factory that will create a giant communal flag to fill the gallery space. Local schools have played a major part in this project, but members of the public are also invited to drop in and join the workforce for sewing and conversation.

In stark contrast to this colourful industry, Chen Chieh-jen's half-hour film, Factory, is a silent work in muted colours that focuses on a group of textile workers who return to their derelict Taiwan factory seven years after it closed. The women pose, still and silent, holding up garments among a rubble of upturned chairs, which later in the film, the begin to set right and clean.

This moving piece demonstrates the fate of unemployed workers, left to linger in the same place when the industry moved on. For info call: 020 7729 9616 or visit: www.iniva.org; To take part in the sewing project until 15 October call: 020 7749 1254; or e-mail: tledda@inniva.org

Mofofest, a regular chart-topper on critics' lists, went into barn-storming, rip-roaring overdrive for an – almost – all-night party in one of Hackney's favourite basements, Barden's Bouldoir

Catering to appetites for upcoming bands, it served an eclectic mix of indie and pop acts interspersed with free-spirited DJs.
Kicking off the night was concept band Gaggle, a 21-plus female choir with a 1980s feel, who were met by a chorus of approval from the crowd.

Following was New York trio Hesta Prynn, boasting fervent drumming, wistful backing vocals and a punk backbone.

Solo drummer Publicist, albeit with a few initial technical problems, hit the audience with a storm of space-funk, redolent of Justice but original in its own right. Internet Forever's songs packed in tinkling lo-fi sweetness with youthful exuberance, while edgy Hackney-based singersongwriter Penelope Edmund relied on her prickly punk rock to add some local flavour. for three Caribbean islands – Trinidad, Grenada and St Lucia – as well as the UK.

The creative project was run by Tropical Isles carnival group at weekly workshops, where the group also created music and dance routines to reflect the islands' history.

Their float will be part of a crowd-stopping procession through the borough when Hackney One Carnival returns for a second year on Sunday 27 September.

Tropical Isles ran the workshops at Homerton

Library for young people from across the borough.

Sharla, 11, researched Grenada's coat of arms; the motto is: 'Ever conscious of God we aspire, build and advance as one people.'

She said: "The words are about inspiring people and showing that everyone is equal."

Nine-year-old Rhia said: "These workshops are fun because you meet new people each week and make new friends that you wouldn't meet at school." Hackney One Carnival

Watch out for the rhino...

By Sadaf Rasheed, 18

MY time on a conservation trip to South Africa with environmental charity Clouddog was one of the most amazing I have ever experienced.

After I designed and implemented a recycling project in my school, Clapton Girls' Technology College, I was chosen as one of 10 students by Clouddog from 100s of applications to participate in a 12-month programme to learn more about ecological issues.

I was thrilled to be given the opportunity to make a positive change in my community, and to be going to South Africa to make a practical difference.

The journey was remarkable: working behind the scenes with vets and ecologists, completing hands-on conservation work, tracking and identifying animals, learning conservation ethics, as well as seeing spectacular animals and scenery. We also got our hands dirty working on a project to bring water to a remote Zulu village. Our last week was spent on a wilderness trail discovering the wildlife of this fantastic country. Who needs National Geographic? Clouddog gave me one of the most spectacular moments of my life – nothing can compare to waking up to a rhino on night watch!

NEW 24-hour service has been launched to support older people in Hackney's retirement housing.

Ashley Court in Boleyn Road, N16, is set to be the first of five sheltered accommodation developments in the borough to benefit from on-site care teams.

The aim is to enable retired residents to live in their own homes for longer. In addition to the 24-hour care suite, a new office, meeting room, kitchen and additional laundry services have also been provided.

The programme is funded by the Council and managed by retirement housing provider Hanover.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, who officially opened the suite at Ashley Court on 4 September, said: "The Council is committed to enabling people to live independent and healthy lives - our Supported Housing with Care programme will help residents to remain as independent as possible, and for as long as possible."

Claire Anderson, director at Hanover added: "Older people have higher expectations of service and there is now an even greater need to give them the peace of mind that care and support is on hand if they need it."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Telephone books

A BOOK group with a difference has opened in Hackney. The Community Library Service and Community Service Volunteers have set up a free telephonebased reading group to cater for people who are elderly, disabled or housebound and want to share ideas on books they have recently read.

The service works using a conference call, allowing up to eight people to speak together, and supports those who may have difficulty accessing libraries. Books are delivered in the required format – ordinary print, large print or talking book - and the group meet by phone every six weeks. There is no charge to join or for the call, however, a home landline is needed.

For more information, contact Chris Garnsworthy at The Community Library Service on: 020 8356 5238; or e-mail: christopher.garnsworthy@hackney.gov.uk

Clean bill of health

HOMERTON hospital has passed a healthcare MOT assessing whether it was protecting patients and staff from the risk of acquiring an on-site infection.

Following a visit from a 'mystery shopper', the hospital was given a clean bill of health by the Care Quality Commission (CQC), which believes the Trust is successfully minimising potential hospital infection hazards.

The Trust's Chief Nurse, Pauline Brown, said: "We are delighted to have passed this important inspection. It reflects the hard work of all our staff and the excellent progress we have made to improve infection prevention and control GENERATIONS of old schoolmasters would have waved their mortarboards in dismay when pupils sneezed into their sleeves.

But during a visit from Ed Balls, Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families, Tyssen pupils learnt an effective way to limit the spread of infections such as swine flu: aim for the arms rather than hands.

The minister used the visit to the Stamford Hill primary on 9 September to urge schools to adopt basic hygiene measures to help curb the spread of swine flu prior to an expected second wave of the virus this autumn. He added: "Over the summer we have been monitoring this closely and the advice to us now is that because the virus has been quite mild and because of the number of cases, closing schools does not do any good in terms of stopping the spread of

Mr Balls also visited Morningside Children's Centre in Chatham Place on 14 September. Together with TV agony aunt Denise Robertson, he launched national Sure Start

Children's Centres Week to promote the support available for families with children under five.

The minister met families and staff and heard about some of the services on offer, including pampering events for parents, drop-in stay and play sessions, as well as Morningside's successful partnership with Birkbeck University to provide on-site child care while parents study to gain credits towards a degree.

T may be hard to imagine now, looking at the modern urban landscape, but one of the great classics of children's literature was inspired by a young girl's experiences growing up in Dalston and Stoke Newington.

'Black Beauty' author Anna Sewell's family moved to Hackney from Norfolk in the 1820s so her father Isaac could find work in the drapery trade. Her mother Mary, was from a a prolific author, whose writings reflected her practical Christian attitudes.

It was whilst living at 12 Park (now Parkholme) Road, Dalston, that Mary Wright Sewell's first book 'Walks With Mama, or, Stories In Words Of One Syllable' was published in 1824. The walks and their accompanying conversations, taken with a fictional child named Anne, must surely have resembled those excursions made by Mary and her young daughter around the then rural Dalston area. The book's constant message against cruelty to animals was later to be brought to fruition by the adult Anna in her only work, 'Black Beauty', with such force that it significantly changed attitudes towards equine welfare on both sides of the Atlantic. In 1832, the family moved to Palatine Cottage, in Stoke Newington, which Isaac converted from the former stable and coach house of Palatine House. With their new home went the use of extensive grounds together with a four acre meadow. One visitor described the Sewell's new home as 'a delightful spot where ... I am happier than in any other place and with any other society.

It was here that an accident occurred that was to shape the rest of Anna's life. In 1834, aged 14, rushing home from school to escape a sudden rain storm, Anna fell badly and seriously damaged both her ankles. The injuries never properly healed and, combined with other health problems which may have been caused by Lupus, Anna gradually became housebound. Black Beauty himself also suffered from broken knees, and like Anna spent his life moving from one home to another.

In 1835, the family left Stoke Newington for 5 Down Cottages near Shacklewell Green, today part of Rectory Road, but the next year they moved to Brighton and then back to Norfolk, where Anna's life became confined to the sofa and she composed her 'autobiography of a horse', often dictating to Mary who later used her own contacts to get the unusual novel published.

Mary tended lovingly to her daughter until Anna's death in 1878, aged 58, only five months after the publication of 'Black Beauty'. Losing her beloved husband only months after her daughter, Mary herself lived on until 1884.

A NEW advertising campaign is urging Hackney's drivers to 'give motorcyclists a second thought' and help cut the number killed or injured on our roads

The Transport for London safety campaign warns road users of the optical effect caused by the way the brain assesses approaching objects that can lead to collisions. Drivers can underestimate the time that small vehicles take to reach them causing risk of collision when pulling out in front of approaching motorcycles.

Created by renowned designer Peter Saville, the ads will be shown in cinemas and on TV for eight weeks. Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "This is an important campaign which serves as a valuable reminder for drivers in the borough to look out for

Million pound investment

STOKE Newington Church Street is getting a million-pound investment to improve the roads and pavements. Residents were asked their views in July and the majority of responses were in favour of a major makeover. The improvements include reducing the speed limit from 30 mph to 20 mph, adding new paving between Albion Road and the A10, new road surfacing between Albion Road and Wilmer Place and installing speed humps on the entrances to some of the side roads. Also, eight new trees will be planted, 11 new cycle stands created and there will be a tidy up of street clutter such as bollards, guard railings and signs. The works started on 14 September and will take three to four months to complete. During the works there will be a one way system in operation from Wilmer Place to Albion Road. For more info, call: 020 8356 2897.

Recycling Manager talks to Hackney Today about the role of Recycling Assistant

What are the main responsibilities of the role? Your aim would be to help increase recycling levels in Hackney. The responsibilities that go with this are extremely varied and interesting. They include working as a team to help to implement new services, monitoring the performance of these and carrying out assessments of properties in Hackney to determine what services can be provided to them. You'll also help organise and attend road shows and events, participate in door knocking campaigns. tell residents about services, respond to and address residents' concerns and visit waste and recycling facilities.

In what ways is it challenging?

The waste and recycling industry is dynamic and has to respond to changing legislation to reduce the number children in care by providing high quality support for families. We have several units up and running and are now recruiting skilled Social Workers who are committed to therapeutic and practical as well as developments in technology and infrastructure. We also have challenging recycling targets We need to encourage residents to waste less and recycle more. Key to this is ensuring we deliver excellent services that represent value for money, and meet the needs and expectations of our residents. We often get wish lists from residents of what they want from a service, so you need to be able to communicate clearly how their feedback is incorporated into the service, and why some suggestions can't be included.

How is the job rewarding?

The most rewarding part of the job for me is seeing my efforts improve services for residents. A suggestion can be worked up into a project plan, and if it is agreed, can then be implemented. To be part of this process and see the positive outcome of your work. in terms of increased satisfaction levels and performance, is a great motivator. Getting positive comments from residents at events and road shows is also a good feeling.

Are there any special requirements for fulfilling this role?

Knowledge of the waste and recycling sector is obviously very helpful. We're looking for someone who understands local government, and the issues faced in delivering waste and recycling services in diverse urban areas, Much of the role is based outside the office so an ability to work flexibly is essential. You should also be a team player who is enthusiastic and committed to ensuring our residents receive the best service possible.

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Water House – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. Head Chef Ben Spice tells us about the perfect slow Sunday roast – it takes time, but it's worth the wait.

Get some local vegetables and well cared for meat. In the restaurant, for gravy stock, we use the bones from the mutton, roast them off and put them in a pan with roasted onions, carrots, celery, leek and garlic, cover with cold water bring to the boil and then simmer for 16-24 hrs to create a fabulous meat stock. You can get bones from your butcher if you would like to do this. For the roast potatoes use King Edwards, Maris Piper, Lovers, Desiree or any

Ingredients

- For the roast: mutton shoulder or beef shin
- 4-6 cloves garlic
- 3-4 onions peeled and quartered
- Fresh herbs
- Red wine
- For the Yorkshire puddings: strong white bread flour, eggs, and milk (equal quantities)
- Vegetables: potatoes peeled and chopped to desired size
- · Greens and carrots

Method

• Meat (night before): Brown mutton shoulder slightly in a hot pan, roast onions in a hot oven with fat from meat. Once very brown put meat into a deep roasting tin with 3-4 sprigs of rosemary/thyme/lavender & the garlic cloves (not peeled). Place in hot oven and immediately turn down to 70-80 degrees. Leave for about 2hrs then add meat stock and red wine. This will now need about 20 hrs if your oven is at 70-80 degrees turning a couple of times

- . Veg (on the day): put potatoes in salted water and simmer for 15 mins. Strain and allow steam to escape and let them dry out and cool. Place in a roasting tray with some duck fat or clarified butter, toss to create a rough edge that with make them crispy
- · Carrots should be scrubbed, clean cut, large and then browned slightly before roasting in clarified butter
- · Sweat the greens as this allows the veg to cook in its own liquid
- Use equal volumes of strong white bread flour, eggs, and milk, and pinch of salt - mix very well. Cook in a deep muffin tray and make sure fat (ideally duck fat/beef) is very hot, about 200 degrees (do be careful), pour the mixture carefully into hot fat. Put back in the oven and immediately turn oven down to 190. Leave until golden brown.
- Gravy (on the day): Use stock from mutton. Skim off the fat. Make a roux using some of the fat and white flour. Add juices - whisking to heat out lumns

DO you use Hoxton Square? If so the Council wants your views on how to make it an even more pleasant and green area for residents. Council officers will be visiting Hoxton Square for drop in sessions, so come down and meet them on 11 October, from 11am to 2pm. A £25 shopping voucher is up for grabs. To be in with a chance of winning, just complete a survey and let us know your thoughts. Pick one up from Shoreditch Library: or request one by calling: 020 8356 3859 or visit: www. consultationfinder. com/hackney

Park plans latest

THANKS to all residents who took part in a consultation on the proposed Springfield Park play space phase this summer. We received 345 responses on the issue of where the play space should be located and what facilities included. As a result, it was decided there would be a wetland nature area, a 'social/thinking' space, an imaginative play area, a banked space and climbing area. In phase 2 of the consultation in August, we asked what you thought about draft design ideas developed as a result of the earlier feedback. Keep an eye on this space, as we will be asking your thoughts on the final design proposals soon.

Hackney's wards in alphabetical order

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006

Councillors have a range of responsibilites, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

FRIENDLY FACE IN DIFFICULT TIMES

John Leader, Hygiene Services Manager

THE bereavement service is just one of the operations that hygiene services manager John Leader is responsible for. He is also in charge of the animal warden and pestcontrol services, disposal of clinical waste, the public morgue and Hackney's public lavatories. Now 62, he started working for the Council around 30 years ago as a student environmental health officer and has been in charge of the bereavement service for almost 10 years.

He believes the service is important because it cares for those people who die without any friends or relatives to sort out their funeral arrangements. If loved ones of the deceased can be traced, it can offer them support too. He says: "We're dealing with people who need help. If you have lost a friend or relative, there are lots of procedures to go through that not everyone knows about and if we can help people through that difficult time, it's very rewarding.

Gone, but not forgotten

Nick Rutherford

F someone dies in the borough and no relatives or friends can be found, then the case is referred to the Council's Bereavement Service.

John Leader employs two officers who visit a home where a person has been reported dead and try to trace friends or relatives.

They will also make an inventory of the deceased person's property and put it into storage until someone is found who can claim it.

On one occasion this included £60,000 in used five-pound notes, hidden under a mattress, "I've never seen so much money in my life," said John.

Finds such as these are paid into the Treasury until they are claimed by relatives - unless none come forward.

If no relatives are found to pay for a funeral, the Council arranges it - this has to be done quickly as some faiths, such as Islam and Judaism, bury their dead within set days of death.

"Most of the deceased are older people who have drifted away from their families," said John.

"The service is a safety net, to make sure that people get a decent end to their life. Sadly, a lot of people end up alone, and we try to look after them."

The Bereavement Service makes sure people with no relatives or friends get 'a decent end to their life
